

Abstract

The invention concerns a method for detecting in vitro resistance of cancer cells to an oxaliplatin treatment characterized in that it consists in measuring mitochondrial apoptosis of cancer cells being treated or capable of being treated or to be treated with oxaliplatin.